1. Rename the parks (10)
2. Add new historical markers/additional interpretation (113)
3. Add new monuments (28)
4. Add new artwork (7)
5. Design competition (5)

Additional Comments: (10)
- Re-design the parks to tell a balanced story
- Reconciliation
- Literally take it off the pedestal

Concept B:
Move statues to another location

1. Move to a museum (15)
2. Move to a history park (42)
3. Replace the statues with others
4. Sell or donate the statues (108)

Additional Comments: (27)
- Move Lee statue next to Jackson statue
- Move to Washington & Lee University
- Put it in someone’s year who wants it. I want a refund for my taxes used for maintenance
- Grind the statues up and sell the metal
- Situate statues with the American Flag with words in “with liberty and justice for all” and 1st statement of the Gettysburg Address if possible without destroying base of monuments, lower them so they don’t seem gigantic in size
- I agree with this option it is time to take down vestiges of slavery, racism, and intimidation in our public spaces
- If moving the statues to a history park make sure it tells all of the history
- Move statues to the IX Art Park-redesign, re-name Lee Park as a truly public space for all the public, for everyone
- Move the Jackson statue and use the space for an addition to the courthouse
- Re-name park to Monument Park and add more artwork

Additional Comments: (21)

- Develop educational curriculum & youth programs as part of development of public history-telling (members, plaques, walks) that will encourage local institutions to continue engaging history
- Create a Dialog Park/Space to discuss all issues
- Create a brochure of a history trail
- City ownership of Jefferson City Center to support non-profits that support our African American legacy (like they own McGuffey School)
- More names on Drewary Brown Bridge
